Setting Free the Music, and the Listeners

After months of quarantine and sheltering, the tunes ambled outdoors. Make Music Ditmas took place Sunday in Ditmas Park in Brooklyn to celebrate Father's Day. A range of music — jazz and rock, and classical — was played on seven porches spread throughout Victorian Flatbush. And there was nary a Zoom square in sight. Top, the Kenny Barron trio performing during the festival. And it's true, you simply can't wait on the sax while wearing a mask. Right, face coverings, social distance, sunshine and good music. Below, Al Wilson, of the band Blue Laws, during the fest.
